LLS 246 Gender&Sexuality Latina/o Lit

*LA *US

(same as SPAN 246)

Examination of questions of gender, sexuality, and identity in contemporary Latina/Latino culture through a discussion of novels, performance pieces, essays and films. Spanish majors must complete writing assignments in Spanish. Prerequisite: 200-level course in LLS literature or culture, or SPAN 200.

Topic: "Global Women and Desperate Housewives: Images of Latinas in Contemporary Literature and Culture"

Maria from West Side Story, Charo, Carmen Miranda in the mid-20th Century, these women represented typical "Latinas" in popular U.S. culture. The substantial growth of Latinas/os in all areas of cultural production (e.g. creation, development, financing, promotion, publication, etc.) has generated different and often diverse images. Nevertheless, several key questions remain. How different are these images, and how are they different? Assuming they are different, what do these differences mean and why do they matter? This course will examine recent images of Latinas in contemporary literature, television, and film. We will discuss how these images create, reinforce, and/or challenge stereotypes. Drawing on a careful examination of these images, we will consider the impact of cultural production on dominant norms and attitudes. The course will be taught in English (no Spanish proficiency is required). Spanish majors, however, will be required to complete all written work (including online discussions) in Spanish. Proposed works include: Babel, A Day Without a Mexican, Memory Mambo, Real Women Have Curves, Modern Family, César Chavez, Frontera, Maid in America, Sin Nombre, How the García Girls Lost Their Accents, The House on Mango Street.

LLS 296 Topics Latina/o Studies

Course examines specific topics in Latina/Latino Studies not addressed in regularly offered courses. Examples include theories of ethnic identity, historical foundations, cultural expression, and relevant topics in public policy studies of Latina/Latino communities. May be repeated in same or separate terms to a maximum of 6 hours.

Topic: Bilingualism in US Latina/o Culture

(taught second 8-weeks of semester, October 20- December 10)

The course explores how mainstream popular culture reads the practice of bilingualism. It confronts the idea of a national language and analyzes how bilingualism disrupts the normativity of linguistic homogeneity. The course explores the ideologies involved in the stewardship of bilingualism and the construction of the cultural canon. It analyzes the different labels assigned to US Latino Spanish: Spanglish, Chicano Spanish, New Rican Spanish, Mock Spanish, etc., and sets the nomenclature in its historical discursive context. Students will be encouraged to engage in cultural readings of popular media offerings where Spanish-English bilingualism is present.

Topic: Race, Gender, and Sexuality

(meets with AAS 299 & GWS 295)

This course is a methodological introduction for students interested in performing critical analyses of cultural/aesthetic, institutional, and governmental structures. It is designed to give students the intellectual tools to practice interrogating structures of power and to prepare them for upper-division work in interdisciplinary studies. As part of this training, we will explore different forms of intersectional analysis and critiques of intersectionality. Issues covered will include identity formation, models for comparative ethnic studies, postcolonial feminisms, contact theory, neoliberalism, and queer of color critique.

Examples include theories of ethnic identity, historical foundations, cultural expression, and relevant topics in public policy studies of Latina/Latino communities. May be repeated in same or separate terms to a maximum of 6 hours.

Topic: Race, Memory, and Violence

(meets with AAS 390)

This interdisciplinary course examines how processes of racial formation and histories of racial violence shape how and what we know about the past—in historical narratives and in collective and individual memory. We will consider how narratives of the past are produced—from the selection of facts, their assemblage into archives, and the creation of historical stories from the archives, as well as in the living and recorded memories. We will examine historical narratives about racial violence in the United States—including slavery, lynching, imprisonment, and warfare—and consider how archives and historical narratives enact obscure resistant, alternative, or subjugated knowledges about these violent pasts. Further, we will examine contemporary engagements with such pasts that attempt to re-read these histories in the hopes of disrupting dominant narratives about Western modernity and U.S. nationhood to imagine alternative futures.

LLS 449 Issues in Latina/o Educ

(same as CI 449)

Critiques and explores various theoretical frameworks used to explain Latina/Latino academic achievement. Examines curricular and instructional issues by investigating how different school systems have implemented schooling for Latina/Latino students. Develops critical understanding of the role of education within the Latina/Latino community.

Topic: “The Educational Pipeline of the Latina/o Diaspora”

This course is a survey of the dominating theoretical frameworks used in Education research to discuss the educational achievement (or lack thereof) of diverse Latina/o students throughout the P-20 pipeline. There are four main goals for this course: 1) to deconstruct each framework by assessing whether social, political, economic, cultural, etc. factors are taken into consideration, 2) to examine how these frameworks are used to prepare pre-service and in-service educators (teachers and counselors), 3) to explore alternate frameworks that challenge problematic theories, and 4) to gain a critical understanding of the connection between theory, research, and practice. Throughout the semester, we will read and discuss work that discusses the influence of such frameworks in educational structures, processes, and discourses, in order to better understand the teaching and learning experiences of Latina/o youth.

LLS 496 Seminar in Latina/o Studies

May be repeated up to a maximum of 6 undergraduate hours or 12 graduate hours

Topic: "Latina/o Performance"

(meets with ENGL 475 and GWS 495)

How does one read a body and a body of work? This course will take as its basic premise that all bodies ask to be read, whether these bodies are socially, culturally, racially, and sexually coded, or bodies of work. In this course we will trace the historical underpinnings of Latina/o performances from the 1960s to the present in order to underscore the relationship between exercises of everyday life and acts on stage. The Latina/o body is not only marked by modalities of difference, but is an essential instrument of the subject-oftentimes unheard, unsayable, and unnoticed. Therefore, in this course a double gesture in bodily reading will occur: one that brings to the fore a particular type of performance as an intellectual corpus, and the other that highlights specific enduring bodies in times. To that end, we will critically engage with performance scripts, media works of performances, theorizations of Latinidad and the body.
