(restricted to first time freshmen students)

Topic: “Politics of Undocumented Immigration”

This course focuses on how undocumented immigrants in the United States have historically been constructed as a “problem” and on various ways that political and other authorities have consequently sought to govern them. Topics might include nativism, criminalization, legalization, border policing, deportation, detention and incarceration, welfare reform, anti-immigrant policy activism, and immigrant rights.

LLS 385 Theory and Methods in LLS
*ACP
Introduction to the interdisciplinary theories and methods of Latina/Latino Studies. Traditional approaches to the study of ethnicity and race will be interrogated through critical scholarship produced by Latina/Latino Studies scholars across a variety of approaches (anthropology, communications, literature, history, sociology, among others). By learning about a variety of methodological approaches, students will become proficient in conducting ethnic studies research projects about U.S. Latina/o populations.

LLS 391 Oral History Methods
(same as HIST 391)
Introduces students to the ethical discourses and practical methods in oral history. Its primary purpose is to prepare students with oral and archival research skills that are crucial for the examination of the history and memory of communities. Among the questions that the class will consider are: what is the connection between the historical record and the remembered past? How reliable are these memories and does reliability matter? How do people mobilize and manipulate accounts of the past for purposes of community building, historic preservation, and political development?

Topic: Queer Latinidades

(meets with GWS 395)

This course uses queerness as an analytical lens to understand various forms of non-normative Latina/o identities. Both dominant White culture and mainstream Latina/o communities have notions of appropriate and/or authentic Latina/o identities. This class critiques mainstream constructions of Latinidad by focusing in particular on Latinidades that exist in the margins of margins, like locas (effeminate gay Latinos), machas (butch lesbian Latinas), poor Latina mothers, trans* Latinas/os, Latina/o sex workers, and indigenous and Afro-Latinidades.

Topic: Prison, Race, and Terror

(meets with AAS 390 and GWS 395)

The United States has the highest rate of incarceration in the world. In addition to the 2.5 million people imprisoned under the criminal justice system, the U.S. government captures even more people into carceral spaces within and beyond its borders. This course examines the U.S. prison regime--manifested not only in the prison as a physical place or institution, but also enacted in active practices that seek to shore up state authority by exercising extraordinary power over inmates. Reading scholarship in critical ethnic studies, particularly regarding U.S. prisons, immigration, and warfare, we will examine three areas of U.S. imprisonment--criminal justice, immigrant detention, and martial imprisonment. We will focus on narratives told from the perspectives of prisoners--in autobiographies, documentary films, and testimonies.

LLS 479 Race, Medicine, and Society (B)
(same as AAS 479 and ANTH 479)

The idea of race has historically been central to how Western cultures conceptualize and think about human difference. This course examines the historical significance of race through one domain of knowledge: medicine. Specifically, it will be concerned with "race" as a central category in the medical construction and management of individuals and populations. Case studies might focus on colonial medicine, race and public health, sexuality and reproduction, global health disparities, and genetics and genomics. Topic: Bilingualism in US Latino Culture

(meets with CI 590)

This graduate course on "Bilingualism in US Latino Culture" explores how mainstream popular culture reads the practice of bilingualism. It confronts the idea of a national language and analyzes how bilingualism disrupts the normativity of linguistic homogeneity. The course explores the ideologies involved in the stewardship of bilingualism and the construction of the cultural canon. It analyzes the different labels assigned to US Latino Spanish (Spanglish, Chicano Spanish, New Rican Spanish, Mock Spanish, etc.) and sets the nomenclature in its historical discursive context. Students will be encouraged to engage in cultural readings of popular media offerings where Spanish-English bilingualism is present.
